FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

The Situation in Wall Street and Its Eurroundings.

No Changes in the Monetary Situation - Gold Firm at 110 a 110 3-8.

WALL STREET, }
SATURDAY, Oct. 3-6 P. M. } The business of to-day, while not so large in volume as that of some other days in the week, showed no change in the almost acrimonious character of the struggle between the advance elements of the street. Lake Shore continues to be the central point of attraction, and, with Western Union, upholds the market. Such short interest as existed in the early part of last month has been closed out, and whatever new ventures are made in this direction are so temporary and feeble that they only result in augmenting ex-isting strength. There are not wanting those, however, who, while "long" of stock, take advantage of each rise of half per cent to increase their investments, still watch with wary eyes for the first symptoms of a decline, and will be first to turn their backs upon the market, in order to escape what they claim may be a long, dull winter season. This might have been expected. They are of a class who do not take much

THE GILT-EDGED REPORTS of great crops, large railroad earnings, improvement in manufactures and the prosperity of merchants, and to whom the results of the panic are still a bugbear it not a reality. Their own capital is idle and so they rush into Wall street specula. tions, helping meanwhile to swell the bubbles, and asking themselves the question how much of the wealth of other thousands is likewise unemployed. In the answer they and neither confidence nor encouragement. They see a market that has been moved upwards artificially, and is only sympathetically strong; one which rests on even a weaker basis than that of last spring, when "inflation" was the cry of the street and everybody was predicting a period of un-exampled prosperity. As above indicated, however, not a little outside money is swooping around the maeistrom of the great gamble, and in the lucky turns of the last fortnight hundreds have blessed good fortune for existing opportunities. The choice of investment, it may be said, has been confined principally to the dividend paying stocks, and others which are outside of the Granger influence, and in this respect it is gratitying to observe that the comments and suggestions of this column have been verified by present re-

Wall street was quiet yesterday. There were sustained by any facts it would be unjust to mention even the names of the respective firms. A rather comical episode in Wall street life was the failure of a curbstone broker for the gigantic amount of $458. He was not present to meet his obligations and his stock being sold under the rule neited more than he owed, leaving quite a little balance in his favor. This queer incident provoked a good deal of humorous comment in the street. Mr. Clews office remained open yesterday. Mr. Clews said that, although the English house had made some opposition, he had raised a loan of £100,000, and expected the money in a lew days. Messrs, S. Kaufman & Co., 29 Broad street, flad not made out their statement and will not be able to do so until they have heard from their Liverpool and Savanna's branches. Spofford Brothers denied the reports of their suspension. of a curbstone broker for the gigantic amount of ports of their suspension.
